

leCOOL

April 29 2012

lesunday

opening Neverland

Peter Pan Syndrome isn't actually a bad thing, if you've got it under control. However, when being a big kid becomes pathological, it can start to become a little sad. Michael Jackson was just one of those kids who never wanted to grow up, not surprising really as he had his childhood snatched away from him. Only months before he died, an auction was carried out at Neverland, and one of the most revealing objects on offer was a Peter Pan book. So now that a little time has passed, Katherine di Turi has recreated this bid thanks to significant objects that can help us understand the personality of the absent King of Pop. It's also a way of showing that material things are what represent us, and that we will always leave them goods 'n' shackles behind, even if we have grown up./ Miriam Arcera Trans. by Kat

where

Tiendaderecha, c/ Alegre de Dalt, 16

Location Map

when

Thu. 1st at 7pm & till 11st of July

how much

Free

NEW

SHARE THIS

PRINT

ADD TO CALENDAR